Task 1: Request for Remote Work Policy

Excellent sample answer (written at around CLB 11–12, an estimate, not an official score)

Dear [Manager's Name],

I hope you are doing well. Given the evolving workplace landscape, I believe it would be beneficial to establish a clear remote work policy for our company. Research has shown that remote work can enhance productivity and employee satisfaction while reducing overhead costs.

Without a formalized policy, employees face uncertainty about remote work expectations. I propose creating a structured policy outlining eligibility, communication expectations, and performance tracking. I would be happy to assist in drafting recommendations.

I appreciate your time and consideration. I look forward to your thoughts on this matter.

Sincerely,

[Your Full Name]

Task 2: Workplace Wellness Programs

Excellent sample answer (written at around CLB 11–12, an estimate, not an official score)

I strongly advocate for Option B, as mental health workshops provide a comprehensive and inclusive solution to enhance employee wellness.

In high-pressure work settings, stress and burnout are widespread, and offering workshops—such as mindfulness training or stress-reduction seminars—equips staff with tools to build resilience and maintain efficiency.

Unlike gym memberships, which appeal primarily to fitness enthusiasts, mental health support addresses universal needs, ensuring all employees benefit. While physical health is worthwhile, prioritizing mental well-being delivers greater long-term gains in morale, retention, and productivity. This choice reflects a forward-thinking commitment to a thriving workforce.
