Time: 26 minutes · Length: 150–200 words

Healthy Eating Campaigns Survey

Promoting healthy eating is vital for improving public health and reducing medical costs. Communities need effective campaigns to encourage people to make healthier food choices.

Which campaign should your city start first?

- Option A: Put up clear, easy-to-read nutrition labels in restaurants and cafeterias.
- Option B: Organize fun, interactive cooking classes and food festivals featuring healthy recipes.

Please choose one option and explain your preference.

Write about 150–200 words.

Your answer: _____ words

Task 1: Request for Guest Speaker at Event

Excellent sample answer (written at around CLB 11–12, an estimate, not an official score)

Dear Dr. Patel,

I'm delighted to invite you to be a guest speaker at our community wellness event, designed to foster healthier living among our neighborhood residents. Your participation would make a profound impact.

On Saturday, May 10, we're hosting a gathering to educate attendees on nutrition and sustainable health practices. Your distinguished reputation as a physician, coupled with your compelling presentations on dietary wellness, makes you the perfect candidate to captivate our audience. We envision a 30-minute talk at 2 p.m., where you could share actionable advice on balanced eating, empowering residents to enhance their quality of life. Your insights would resonate deeply, inspiring lasting change in our community.

Please confirm your availability for May 10 or suggest an alternative date that suits you. Thank you for considering this meaningful opportunity—I'm eager to collaborate.

Sincerely,

Emma Davis

Task 2: Healthy Eating Campaigns Survey

Excellent sample answer (written at around CLB 11–12, an estimate, not an official score)

Providing easy-to-understand nutrition labels in all restaurants and cafeterias (Option A) is likely to have the greatest overall impact. Transparency about calories, fat, and sugar content enables individuals to make informed choices every time they dine out. While cooking classes and food festivals (Option B) offer engaging opportunities to learn about nutrition, they appeal mainly to those who are already motivated. Comprehensive labeling reaches a broader audience and promotes long-term healthy eating habits across the population.
